

C. Dan Siapco, MD

Dr. C. Dan Siapco joined Cascadia Eye in 2003. He rapidly gained a reputation in Skagit Valley as the ophthalmologist to choose for cataract surgery, and won the award from Northwest Business Monthly for “Best Northwest Doctors in Skagit Valley” after only a few short years here. He graduated from Loma Linda University School of Medicine, interned at Sacred Heart Medical Center in Spokane, and did his ophthalmology residency at the University of Pittsburgh. Dr. Siapco is board-certified by the American Board of Ophthalmology.

Dr. Siapco has performed well over 15,000 cataract surgeries. He has extensive experience with presbyopia-correcting intraocular lens implants and has been performing complex cataract surgeries since 2003. Over this time, he has witnessed many improvements in this exciting technology.

Dr. Siapco serves as the Medical Director of the Eye Associates Surgery Center and is instrumental in making sure Cascadia Eye always has the best technology available for our patients.

Family and Personal Passions

Dr. Siapco is very active in overseas missions and helps underprivileged patients through the nonprofit Eyewitness Missions, which has allowed him to assist in restoring sight worldwide to those who otherwise would not have access to cataract surgery. He is an avid musician and has been playing the guitar and writing music for over 30 years and has two sons, Christian and Asher.
